Karyn Yandow has been photographing private and public gardens in San Francisco and the Bay Area for over twenty years. She looks for a beauty that elevates the imagery into a realm of abstraction while remaining representational. Plants reflect the magnificence and vulnerability of all living things.

Karyn's photography has been greatly influenced by her early childhood walks on her maternal grandmother's 100 acre farm in the northwest corner of New Jersey. Karyn's grandmother would take her on very early morning walks in search of the mysteriously elusive "jack in the pulpit" , wildflowers, skunk cabbage and frogs eggs in the musty swamps. They were always on a hunt to discover a plant or flower during its brief existence on earth. Karyn continues to seek out sensuous and ephemeral botanical imagery that is metaphorical for the transcendent and intimate moments in our lives.

Karyn Yandow has exhibited her photography in San Francisco and the Bay Area at such venues as Yerba Buena Center For The Arts, Falkirk Cultural Center, Sebastopol Center For The Arts, Berkeley Art Center, Bolinas Museum , Gallery Route One , and the Center For Photographic Arts.
